

CIVICNESS: ATTITUDES AND BEHAVIOUR OF CITIZENS IN EVERYDAY LIFE

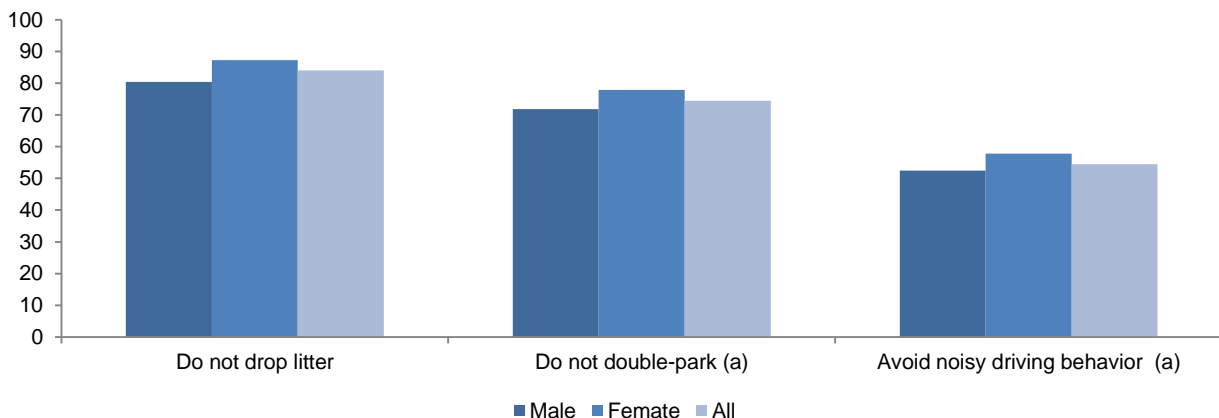

Years 2016-2018

In 2018, 84% of people aged 18 and over reported to never drop litter, 74.4% of drivers declared to never double-park a car and just over half of people said to take care to avoid adopting noisy driving behaviour.

In 2016, people appeared to be rather permissive with respect to parking where it was forbidden (23.4% of respondents considered it admissible under certain conditions), using the mobile phone when driving (admissible according to 18.5%) and especially both to be recommended to have a work and to not paying taxes (admissible behaviour according to about 30% of the population).

One quarter of people aged 14 and over (25.8%) thought that corruption was a natural and unavoidable fact, dangerous (60.4%) and useless (36.1%) to be reported.

Almost half of the citizens would accept a request under-the-table payment to provide professional service and a similar percentage would not complain in case of non-issuance of the receipt.

As regards school, one third of citizens believed that cheating was not a serious behaviour and copying above all a damage to the detriment of those who copy (about 34%). Only 29% considered copying a behaviour that damaged everyone.
